TRUCK KILLS 'BOBBY' HAKE

5-YEAR-OLD BOY IN FATAL ACCIDENT AT IOWA CITY, IA.

FUNERAL HELD HERE

Man Who Drove Heavily Loaded Vehicle Is Not Blamed.—Child Watching Concrete Mixer.

Bobby Hake, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hake of this city, was instantly killed at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Iowa City, Ia., when a wheel of a truck loaded with cement passed over his head.

Bobby, whose full name was Robert W., had arrived in Iowa City with his mother late Monday to be with Mr. Hake, head of the physics department at the State Teachers College here, who is taking research work at the University of Iowa at Iowa City.

Yesterday afternoon, according to a press report, he was watching a concrete mixer at work and he had stepped into the street behind the mixer. The noise of the mixer drowned the noise of the passing truck, heavily loaded. After the cab and front wheels had passed, Bobby backed into the truck, falling in front of the rear wheel, and his head was crushed.

Irwin Eves, driver of the truck, will not be held, according to John H. Donohue, coroner at Iowa City.

The child's body was brought to Maryville this morning and funeral services was held at the First Methodist Church at 4 o'clock this afternoon, after which it was taken by train to Hoyleton, Ill., Mr. Hake's former home. The funeral was conducted by Dr. C. C. James.

Bobby was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Hake and was a universal favorite.

The Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Harper of Moberly, Mo., parents of Mrs. Hake, and Miss Pauline Harper, her sister, arrived in Maryville this morning. They will accompany the body to Hoyleton.

Tribute to Bobby was paid in the State Teachers College assembly this morning by Harry A. Miller, instructor in public speaking. The student body responded by standing for several minutes in silent prayer. The last hour classes this afternoon were dismissed to allow students and teachers to attend the funeral services.

Mr. Diss preceded his widow in death just ten years to the day. He died June 29, 1916. Mrs. Diss had been a resident of Nodaway County fifty-five years. For forty-five years the family lived on a farm, six miles west of Maryville, moving to the present home on West First street about twenty-one years ago.

Fountain Installed at Fourth and Dunn

One Given to City by National Humane Alliance Is Moved to New Beauty Spot.—Another for C. H.

With the installation of a fountain formerly at the corner of Fourth and Market streets, the intersection of Fourth and Dunn streets has begun to take on the appearance of a small park. The fountain was installed by city workmen Monday and Tuesday under the direction of Mayor W. O. Garrett. Today it had been connected with a water line, and water was flowing down its sides.

The fountain is the one which originally was erected by the National Humane Alliance for the watering of birds, dogs and horses. Horses no longer have access to it, but birds and dogs still may use it. A sidewalk will be built from the curb to the fountain and drinking facilities installed for humans.

Around the fountain, which is of red granite, is a concrete pool.

Wabash employes also are at work on new curbing and a sidewalk on the south side of the city project.

A drinking fountain also has been ordered by the city and county jointly to replace the useless relic which stands in front of the courthouse. It has been shipped but has not yet arrived.

Work Resumed Today at Quitman Oil Well

Contractor Rose Succeeds In Getting Six-Inch Casing, and Fresh Drilling Will Start Soon.

Work at the Quitman oil well was resumed this afternoon after a more or less complete shutdown for several days. The work this afternoon consisted of cleaning up preparatory to starting tomorrow on drilling out the debris in the hole caused by caving and reaming. By tomorrow night, G. H. Rose, drilling contractor, expects to be at the bottom of the hole, already sunk to the 1,190-foot depth.

Returning from a trip to Kansas City, Mr. Rose announced today that he had been successful in obtaining 1,500 feet of 6¼ inch casing, used but in good condition and enough to sink the hole to its stipulated depth.

Mr. Rose was accompanied to Kansas City by Mrs. Rose and their son, Raymond.

Two men from Kansas City, T. C. McDonald and C. E. Rollestine, were in Maryville yesterday to negotiate with Rose for the drilling of a well near Smithville, Mo.

PLAN MERGER OF RAILROADS

EXECUTIVES TO MEET OWN INDIVIDUAL REQUIREMENTS.

I. C. C. ABANDONS HOPE

L. F. Loree, R. R. Head, Spends Day in Consultation With Commerce Commission Members.

Washington, June 30.—The big railroad executives of the country, apparently convinced that the Interstate Commerce Commission has abandoned hope of consolidating the railroads into nineteen major groups as outlined in the transportation act of 1920, are now centering their plans on merging various lines to meet their own individual requirements.

The fact that the commission has virtually abandoned its tentative consolidation plan was emphasized today after L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson railroad, had spent a day with members of the Interstate Commerce Commission and several members of the Senate and House interested in railroad mergers. Loree's mission was to explain his purpose in merging the Kansas City Southern, of which he is chairman of the board, with the St. Louis Southwestern and the Missouri, Kansas and Texas roads.

The Loree application is expected to be filed with the commission some time this week. On its heels will come the renewed Van Swearingen proposal to merge the Chesapeake & Ohio, the Hocking Valley, the Pere Marquette and the Erie and Nickel Plate, followed by the plans of the second Rock Island system to absorb the St. Louis and San Francisco line.

START INQUIRY INTO WET FUND

SENATORS INVESTIGATE BREWERS CONTRIBUTIONS

A REPEAL RESOLUTION

Senator Edwards, Wet Leader, Drafts Article Calling for a National Prohibition Referendum

Washington, June 30.—A searching inquiry into charges that a group of brewers poured a stream of gold into Pennsylvania's recent three-million-dollar Senatorial primary was initiated today by the Senate slush fund committee as the first step in an effort to learn whether a nation-wide wet combination has been created to influence American elections.

The committee summoned Capt. William H. Stayton, head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, as the first witness in its wet inquiry, which was prompted by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, who charged at a secret session of the committee that Pennsylvania brewers had raised a slush fund to buy the nomination for Representative William S. Vare.

There were rumors today that Wheeler turned over to the committee a series of letters sent out by the Anti-Prohibition Association urging contributions to a national fund which would be used in electing a wet Congress. The letters were said to give evidence of a national organization with local agencies in from thirty to forty states.

In its war against the national dry law and its drive for the election of a wet Congress, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment has spent $1,100,000 in the last six years Stayton told the committee.

Washington, June 30.—A resolution to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, drafted so as to bring about a national referendum on prohibition, was offered in the Senate today by Senator Edward Edwards, Democrat, New Jersey, "wet leader."

The resolution providing for the referendum is based on Article 5 of the Constitutions which authorizes amendments to be passed upon by conventions of three-fourths of the states.

Election of delegates to conventions in the various states to vote on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is provided in the resolution.

Four Young Bandits Rob St. Joseph Bank

Escape With More Than $5,000 in Cash—Police in Surrounding Cities are Notified

St. Joseph, June 30—Four bandits today held up the Drovers and Merchants Bank here and escaped with $5,109 in cash. Herding the bank employes into the basement and locking them in, three men took the cash from the valut and escaped in a Buick car. They started south from the bank. The bandits were described by the chief of police as being young men, one about 35 years old and the other three in their early 20s.

Posses from this city trailed the bandits for a short distance but lost them between St. Joseph and Atchison. Police from Leavenworth and surrounding towns have been notified but thus far have been unable to secure any trace of the bandits or car.

ITALY UNDER ECONOMY LAW

MUSSOLINI EXPERIMENTING IN NEW ORGANIZATION.

ON NECESSITY BASIS

One Hour Added to Working Day of Nation, With Many New Regulations Established.

Rome, June 30.—Premier Mussolini attempted a new experiment in social and economic organization today.

With Italian exchange falling and a growing adverse balance of trade, Mussolini has ordered regulations made effective tomorrow, which place the Italian nation on a strict basis of necessity. Luxury and easy living will be virtually ceased because of Mussolini's order.

The Giornale D'Italia, commenting on the premier's new order, declared that "Italy and Europe are facing disruption and the nations of the world will watch with keen interest the progress the new social order, representing the genius of fascism, which has transformed Italy from a nation on the brink of anarchy to a nation where the workers of the government are conserving every ounce of manpower."

The most drastic of the new regulations is the addition of one hour to the working day in every industry in Italy. This move is made in an effort to increase production.

In order to save on the consumption of paper, newspapers are forbidden to publish papers of more than six pages.

The building of non-essential homes, such as villas and palaces, is forbidden and all building operations will be concentrated on the construction of workmen's homes. Merchants are authorized to mix flour with other ingredients and the nation will return to what is virtually war bread. Gasoline is ordered to be mixed with nationally produced alcohol. Committees will be formed to govern the use of raw material and to distribute supplies.

Forest Fire Situation Showing Improvement

One Life Lost and One Man Seriously Injured in Timber Blazes in California

San Francisco, June 30—The forest fire situation in California showed improvement today. Violent electrical storms in the mountains caused the worst flare-up of the year but efficient fighting and favorable weather condition stoday indicated that control would soon be gained of the conflagration, but not before thousands of acres have been burned over.

One life has been lost and one man seriously injured.

More fighters were on the twenty-mile line in Siskyou County where Guy Wilson was trapped and burned to death and Thomas Blake seriously burned.

Immigration Quotas Are Now Exhausted

Washington, June 30.—With the closing of the government's fiscal year today, immigration quotas were exhausted and more than a half-million foreigners were vainly seeking admission to the United States. Under the present quota law, many must wait three years or more before being permitted to enter.

G. O. P. BREACH MORE EVIDENT

"COOLIDGE CONGRESS" IN OPEN REVOLT.

SPLIT ON FARM BILL

President, Who Had Appealed for Republican Solidarity, Able To Command But 23 Votes.

Washington, June 30.—The Sixty-ninth, or "Coolidge Congress," as it was called when it swept into power on the crest of the great Republican landslide in 1924, prepared today to go home bearing but little resemblance to the closely-knit harmonious body that took its seat in December.

Where six months ago all save a handful of the Republican majority were as regular as clock work in their support of the White House, today there is a split of such magnitude that Mr. Coolidge yesterday could command but twenty-three Republican votes on a controversial matter on which he had asked for solid support.

The Senate's crushing defeat of the Fess farm relief bill, indorsed by the President and his cabinet, was the crowning blow at Republican solidarity this session.

The spectacle of a Republican Congress, on the eve of an election that is all important to the party, repudiating the leadership of a Republican President, is almost without parallel in recent political history, and it emphasizes as nothing else could do the width of the chasm that yawns between the Coolidge and anti-Coolidge factions of the party.

Fess Bill Voted Down.

Washington, June 30.—The Fess farm loan relief bill advocated by President Coolidge was defeated in the Senate yesterday, ending for this session all prospect of vital agricultural aid.

The vote was 54 to 26.

This action clears the way for adjournment of congress Saturday.

Twenty-one Republicans, many of them staunch party leaders, voted with thirty-two Democrats and one Farmer-Laborite against the Coolidge measure. Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, and his colleague, Senator Pepper, Republican, Pennsylvania, voted against the measure.

Senator Williams, Republican of Missouri, voted for the bill, while Senator Reed, Democrat of the same state, voted against it.

Words Forecast Defeat.

This slaughter of the administration plan was accomplished by a strange three-ply assortment of transient political bed-fellows which included the Democrats, the radical farm bloc group which was piqued at the rejection of the McNary-Haugen export plan, and several senators from industrial states.

Defeat of the plan indorsed a few days ago by President Coolidge was forecast by the hard words which were flung at it in the afternoon's debate in the sultry senate chamber.

Senator Fess and a few of his assistants sought to defend the plan but their fight was too feeble to stand up under the blows of the opposition.

Assail New Feature.

The new feature of the Fess plan providing that the $100,000,000 to be lent to cooperative associations should be paid back through an amortization fee levied on products handled by the borrowing associations was assailed.

This provision had been slipped into the bill at the last minute to meet the argument that the $100,000,000 revolving loan fund would revolve only in one direction—out from the United States treasury never to come back.

$8,000 of School Bonds Are Burned

Eight bonds amounting to $8,000, part of the school bond issue of 1920, were burned last evening as they had been paid off during last spring and this spring. The witnesses to the destroying of the bonds were L. C. Cook, R. P. Hosmer, E. E. Williams, W. F. Phares and C. A. Hawkins.

The school bond issue of $75,000, voted in 1920 for the addition to the public school building, is now cut down to $55,000.

THE ONLY DAILY PAPER IN NODAWAY COUNTY

DRY ROTARIANS.

A delegate to the big Rotary convention at Denver, talking to a brother Rotarian in a car going up Pike's Peak, said: "This is the first convention I ever attended that I hadn't had a drink by this time. I used to take it for the sake of sociability, but I like the change."

The Denver Post said, during the convention:

"Mingling incessantly with the throngs in Denver this week and participating in the various activities and conversation, the observer is impressed by the total absence of the booze element. The booze taint is absent from the breath of crowds. No matter how dense and close packed the jam of people, the nostrils of the most sensitive person are not offended.

"Booze is as absent from the conversation as it is from the breath. Even the time-honored jokes that passed current in the first years of prohibition have disappeared into the discard."

Those visitors, the Post remarks, represented a fair cross-section of American life. The Post concludes that John Barleycorn in America is "not only legally dead and buried but is mentally and spiritually dead and forgotten."

Here is a note that has not been heard much lately in the prohibition controversy. Doubtless it matters a good deal what the local attitude is about liquor, and where a convention is held; but there is evidently more honest dryness in the country than a lot of ardent wets realize or admit.

BOOTLEG FIREWORKS.

Most communities of any size now forbid the sale of fireworks. Outside many of these towns are zones where the sale has not been outlawed, where stands flourish, selling to automobile parties foolish enough to buy.

The thoughtless parent stops at such a stand and buys this stuff for his progeny, saying scornfullw, "Aw, what's the harm in a few firecrackers? You ought to see the stuff I used to set off when I was a kid!" He has forgotten why the law was made.

Deaths and injuries became so numerous a few years ago that a toll of over a thousand children dead and many more thousands blinded or otherwise injured was taken for granted as a necessary outcome of the holiday. When things got to that pass, enlightened communities decided to put an end to this slaughter of children. The day, in these places, has ceased to be one of horror, and became what it should be, a pleasant day of celebration.

Nor need the most enjoyable fireworks be lacking. The night fireworks, in the hands of a committee of adults who are careful and wise with them, may still give pleasure to everybody for miles around.

SPORT CLOTHES IN FRANCE

With women going in for sports like men, French sportswomen spring a surprise in the matter of costume. They do not agree that athletics will justify costumes approaching nakedness.

The Federation of French Sporting Women rules that any member will be suspended from membership if she wears abbreviated running trunks, skin-tight swimming suits or sleeveless tennis dresses. Trunks must reach below the knee, sleeves must cover one-fourth of the arm and bathing suits must be designed for bathing rather than for exploiting the feminine figure.

Coming from a nation supposed to be rather daring in clothes and loose in morals, this should arouse reflection in the minds of a good many American women.

What Other Editors Say

Against Unwholesome Books.

Salacious reading matter, it is agreed is one of the factors in the problem of youth today. There seems to have been in recent years a virtual conspiracy to place books and magazines of a questionable type within easy reach of the young people. A glance at the material displayed in many shop windows is sufficient to reveal the nature of this influence. Commercialism, of course, is behind the whole thing. The material is prepared because it is believed there is a ready market for it. The market will disappear just to the extent that the public is aroused with regard to the evil and efforts are made to discourage the imbibing of filth spread upon the printed page.

It is through these considerations that the public library authorities of Kansas City, Kas., are justified in a resolution to scrutinize closely all fiction offered for sale to the library for use of juvenile readers. To carry out the plan will require unusual effort, in view of the number of books purchased by the library. But it will be labor well directed. It will afford a type of protection that youthful readers should have; and at the same time it will be notice to certain classes of publishers and writers that their goods are not wanted.

A similar alertness on the part of all those who have to do with furnishing young people with reading material soon would help end a period of indecency in literature.—Kansas City Star.

Labor Meeting Upholds British Miners

Conference Aproves Strike Demands—More Than Two Hundred Resolutions Presented at Meeting.

Huddersfield, England, June 30. — More than 200 resolutions dealing with the mining industry in Great Britain, birth control, women's franchise, factory legislation, unemployment and statuatory offenses were presented at the opening meeting here today of the two-day session of the National Conference of Labor Women.

The meeting opened with the submission of the report of the Agenda Committee, reviewing the national and international problems in which English labor has been interested during the past year. More than 4,000 words of the erport were devoted to a summary of the coal mining situation and an expression of unqualifield suport by the Conference of the miners' 'fight against lower wages and longer working hours." A resolution voicing the sympathy of the conference in the miners' "struggle" was presented for adoption.

A report on "The Threatened Starvation of the Vital Social Services" was then presented by Miss Susan Lawrence, recently elected to Parliament by a larger Labor majority from North Ham. The report declared that until unemployment is made a national burden, health and education cannot expand and that after this is completely accomplished special relief will be needed for necessitous areas.

Several resolutions were submitted form all sections of the conference protesting the government's economy program in its effect on national education and public health services and demanding that a standard of living "be maintained and proposals designed to benefit the surtaxpayer at the expense of those in dire need be withdrawn."

A report was submitted from the Agenda Committee condemning the government in its failure to press legislation permitting English women to vote upon attaining the age of 21, rather than the present age of 30. The Committee's resolution on the franchise called upon "the Labor Party to increase its efforts to achieve this end" and it further calls upon every woman voter and every unenfranchised woman throughout the country to fight vigorously political rights.

Resolutions, condemning the action of Labor members of Parliament in voting against the Thurtle Private Bill, designed to place the distribution of information on birth control within the power of local authorities, were submitted for adoptoin.

"It considers the action of thesemembers a betrayal of the interests and of the expressed wishes of working mothers and Labor women as a whole, and calls upon the party, since the men will not represent the women, to give a large portion of safe seats to women candidates," one resolution stated.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer.

Washington — The United States treasury is all smiles. Joseph Caillaux is France's finance minister again. Secretary Mellon and Minister Caillaux speak the same language.

One speaks English and the other speaks French, to be sure, but they get together on the financial language. Inasmuch as they have extremely important financial business to transact —the French war debt—it is of the utmost importance for them to understand each other fully.

M. Caillaux, it will be recalled, was in this country some months ago in connection with the war debt and he and Secretary Mellon got on together admirably. The agreement they reached failed to hold water, it is true, but that was due to outside influences. So far as those two were concerned, they could have come to terms. Both, practical financiers, each gets the other's viewpoint.

The difficulty in conducting a financial negotiation between two such men as Secretary Mellon and, for example, Henri Berenger, the French ambassador, lies in the fact that the former is a professional financier, the latter only an amateur.

The one's angle is that of a banker. The other's is that of a theorist.

United States secretaries of the treasury generally are theoretical financiers, too, but it happens that the present one is personally in the financial business—or, throughout most of his life, always has been.

The same is true of M. Caillaux.

Caillaux is not a rich man as riches are reckoned in America. That is, he is no such plutocrat as Mellon.

Had a big storm in Iowa, which will be blamed on the recent election.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES P. STEWART.
NEA Service Writer.

Washington—Col. Smith W. Brookhart showed a keen interest in the investigation of Pennsylvania Republican senatorial primary expenses the minute he landed in Washington, from out in Iowa, the other day.

He made for the committee room, where the inquiry was in progress at the time, straight from the Union Railroad Station, before even going to his hotel.

He got a royal reception from some of the committee members, too.

Senator Jim Reed, the chairman, though not of Brookhart's politics, is about as far out of harmony with his party management as the colonel is with his. A terrific scrapper himself, thoughts of the fight the Iowan had just been putting up in his home friends slapped the recently nominated ex-senator on the back, congratulated him and pumped his hand.

The inquiry's kick for Brookhart probably lay in the comparison which he doubtless drew between the measly $3900 he found sufficient to finance his successful Iowa primary campaign were the very thing to thrill him to the core.

Senator Bob LaFollette and Brookhart are fellow insurgent Republicans. The colonel's and Senator McNary's hearts beat as one on the subject of farm relief.

It was a joyful reunion. The investigation had to wait while his paign, and the couple of millions or more spent in Pennsylvania—in vain, at that, on the part of two of the three candidates.

Brookhart's political methods however, are different from those of the effete east.

He requires no money to pay others to help him fight. All the fighting it's necessary to have done in his behalf he's quite capable of doing for himself at next to no expense.

Marion County Cow Testing Association, Reorganized, Starts on Ninth Year

Hannibal, Mo., June 30—The Marion County cow testing association recently has reorganized and started its ninth year with John Pflantz of Hannibal as president. B. F. Cooper was elected vice-president, and W. W. Abright, secretary-treasurer. Oliver J. Bigler was re-employed as tester.

From a standpoint of continuous operation this is the oldest association in Missouri and one of the oldest in the middle West. The results demonstrate clearly the value of keeping continuous records on the dairy herd. For both production and profit this association is one of the leading groups of dairymen in the middle West.

Since this organization nine years ago this group of dairymen have continually studied their records and used them as a means of increasing production and profit. Three years ago the association averaged 310 pounds of butterfat a cow. That was about three times the average production of the average Missouri cow and was the first association in Missouri to average over three hundred pounds of butterfat a cow. The next year the average was 312 pounds of fat. Last year the average production was 318 pounds of fat and the average profit above all feed and pasture was $131.32 a cow.

A number of outstanding herds have been developed as a result of this association. Nine years ago B. F. Cooper of Hannibal had eighteen cows which averaged 247 pounds of butterfat and about $67 each above feed and pasture. Last year he had nineteen cows which averaged 468 pounds of fat and $215.22 above all feed and pasture cost. In other words with only one more cow he increased his profits by over $2,800. W. A. Haydon, across the county line in Ralls County, has done almost equally well by keeping his records and studying them.

"I am making dollars now where I wouldn't be making quarters if it hadn't been for the cow testing association," he said.

The Ralls County dairymen have reorganized the cow testing association for another year. N. B. Blish of New London, is the new president and R. A. Langenbacher of Renselaer, is vice-president. Ben O'Keefe of Hannibal is secretary-treasurer and the directors include W. A. Haydon of Hannibal, Arlie Lake of New London, and W. R. Maddox of Rensselaer. Arthur Reckamp was re-employed as tester.

The association voted to publish a printed report of the year's activities. Ben O'Keefe and Robert Scyoc of Hannibal were chosen to assist the tester and county agent, W. A. Rhea, in publishing this report.

Announcement of Intention to Continue the Practice of Dentistry in Maryville

So many of my friends in Maryville and Nodaway County have expressed the desire for me to continue to practice dentistry here that I have decided to do so.

Accordingly, I have a newly decorated and equipped office for the use of my friends and patrons and with the kind of service which has characterized my practice throughout the years, I shall hope for no more than my just portion of work in my line. I feel that the public is so familiar with my qualifications as a dental craftsman that no mention need be made of them here.

I am now ready to resume practice following the break which was made necessary during the modernizing of my office and I shall hope to be numbered among the dentists of Maryville for many years to come if the demands for my services seem to justify it.

BRITISH TRADE SEES BIG DROP

VOLUME OF BUSINESS TAKES A $240,000,000 DROP

COUNTRY IS STARTLED

Stoppage of All Coal Mines Forces Big Industries in England to Slow Down Greatly

London—A drop of $240,000,000 in the volume of British trade during the month of May is the first dire result of the coal strike. It follows a drop of $160,000,000 during April when the strike was threatening.

Bad as these figures are, they are nothing to what is expected to come during June and July. The full effect of the strike has not yet even begun to be realized. The above figures only relate to goods manufactured long before the strike. At present, manufacture every where is dying to nothing.

Coal Reserves

Most industrial concerns started the strike with a certain reserve of coal upon which they could work on a restricted basis. But reports from all parts of the country show that these supplies have become exhausted or that exhaustion is setting in.

The contrast between British trade in May 1925 and May 1926 can be best realized from these figures.

May 1924
Imports	$406,000,000
Exports	226,000,000
Re-exports	37,000,000
Txcess of Imports	135,000,000
Imports	135,000,000
May 1925
Imports	$520,000,000
Exports	320,000,000
Re-exports	72,000,000
Excess of Imports	127,000,000

Each day this creeping paralysis on British industry grows worse and worse.

Whole Cities Idle

In some of the busiest manufacturing districts of the North and North East of England practically whole cities are standing idle. Each trade and industry as it shuts down affects others, until the strangulation effect is becoming almost complete.

As for the actual loss caused by cessation of the coal industry, it can be reckoned at $60,000,000 a week, apart from the loss caused to the pits themselves through non-working and neglect. This figure is based on an average output in Britain of 5,000,000 and an average selling price of $9 per ton. The strike came into operation on May 3rd.

91 at 1 o'Clock.

The temperature at 1 o'clock this afternoon was 91, according to J. P. Brink, weather observer. Yesterday it was 95.

Thomas H. Benton Unwavering in His Devotion to American Republic

Frank P. Litschert National Repu

Typical of the nevest, representative of that stly of pioneers who filtered the eastern mountains to found mpire west of the Appalachian omas Hart Benton, author, sta and patriot of the highest coun honorably represented his adate of Missouri in the Unite senate for almost a generation who finally went down fighti the Union which he loved so ton was the last of the great mocrats of the South, of Andrew Jackson was the and his courage and his r the flag were proved bystern fight against disunion, resented in the closing days bority of his own party at hom statesmen of the North who wa the preservation of the Uni patriots, but they had their peopl them. How much more heroic task then of the sturdy Missou did not falter in his suppor Union when he knew that his ple were hostile to him.

Benton came in nate with his state, and he dicinquish his place in the polit a until a few years before the of the great tragedy of the career was a long and honoral and while he may have mades he never swerved in his lo his country.

A

Benton was b range County, North Carolina, 1782, of good colonial stock. Dr. a lawyer of repute, died whon was a boy. He studied at h attended grammar school, then d in the North Carolina univers left his studies there when the cided to move to the wildernes Nashville, Tenn. Here Benton w the new farm and entered ful the life of the frontier, which always a peaceful one.

The coming n entered politics in 1811, whis elected to the state legislatur though he was a slave owner, nificant that he sponsored a law the slave the same rights in jury that the white man poss Benton, like his fellow pioneers ly favored the second war aga land and served as a colonel of ers under Jackson, although little, if any, actual service. the war closed, Benton decided arther west and he crossed into then the limit of civilization, his future home.

Like his fellows, Benton, who was now a full lawyer, held to the theory that the manifest destiny of the States to acquire all the rest ontinent to the Pacific. And g to this policy tenaciously du his public career, becoming at champion in the senate of winning of the West."

Missouri's ente Union brought the question cy into national prominence forst time. Benton approved the Missouri compromise, and took as United States senator from Monroe was then President nited States, and after the fampromise the slavery issue disl from national politics for seve rs.

Wison.

Benton early interested in the Oregon question though a southerner, advocate extension of our free territory Northwest. With him pride of ce as always paramount. One of acts in the senate was to spon ill to establish a trading road the Southwest from Missouri Mexico. The bill became a law a oad, as a pioneer highway, play important part in our developmem claims to the Southwest.

When the ce of 1824 came about, Benton s a supporter of Clay, but finall up with Jackson, developing a le of the Jackson Democrats whid not relinquish until after he lic life.

When the fariff bill of 1828 was enacted Benkly stated that he opposed it ciple, but would vote for it becaive Missouri protection on lead. campaign of the same year Jacks elected President. Benton his representative in the senad he found foemen worthy of l. Calhoun presided over the body, and in the political opposit Washington were the eloquent Wind the brilliant Henry Clay.

Then came th bill of 1832, the re-election of J and the nullification episode th Carolina. As was to be expec ton heartily supported his chie filling the turn' on South Carolibster acted with him, and the tleded in getting through the see "Force bill' which would gi President power to defend the authority in case of trouble. Theon was eased by the preparation of a compromise tariff bill in which Clay and Calhoun agreed, recognizing the "principle" of protection, but gradually reducing the duties.

Fought For The West.

In Jackson's historic fight on the United States Bank, Benton led the Jacksonian forces in the senate. Clay and Calhoun poured out vials of wrath on the head of the President and the logic of Webster, too, was directed against him. And in Benton the President had the only senator who had the ability to meet them. Benton defended the use of gold and silver money, as against paper, and won for himself the nickname of "Old Bullion." In his speeches advocating a gold currency he proved that he realized the dangers of cheap paper money.

Early in his career as a senator Benton became the leader of those who fought for the development of the West. He continually advocated the selling of public lands to pioneers and the encouraging of the settlers, and our empire across the Mississippi owes a priceless debt to him for his efforts.

When Calhoun proposed distributing the surplus from the sale of public lands among the states, Benton vehemently opposed him and declared rather than this that the price of land ought to be reduced to settlers and the surplus used for strengthening the defenses of the United States.

When the slavery question began to assume a national aspect again the Abolitionists came into prominence and flooded congress with petitions for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia. Benton voted to receive these petitions and against the so-called "gag rule." He was not in favor of stirring up the slavery question, however, and fondly hoped that some time there might be a gradual and peaceful emancipation of the slaves. When Calhoun introduced a bill to penalize postmasters who permitted any document touching slavery to go into the mails addressed to states which prohibited the circulation of anti-slavery documents, Benton again opposed Calhoun and the bill was defeated.

Sub-Treasury System.

Van Buren succeeded Jackson and the great panic came. Benton advocated measures providing for an independent federal treasury and for hard money payments, and led the fight to enact the law which gave us our sub-treasury system.

In the same administration, Benton, always watching the interests of the West, succeeded in strengthening the homestead laws, allowing, among other things, public land which had been on the market for five years to be reduced to $1 and then to 75 cents an acre.

Then came the Whig victory of General Harrison and his death and succession of Taylor, who was nearer a Democrat of the Calhoun persuasion than a Whig. The Ashburton treaty was drawn up providing for the fixing of the boundaries between the United States and Canada in the northwest. Always demanding the fullest expansion of our boundaries, Benton opposed the treaty as yielding too much to Great Britain. The fact that this involved northern territory made no difference to him, and when the Oregon question arose he took a stand for pushing the American claims to the limit. He advocated a law giving each settler a section of land who would move into the Oregon territory.

Annexation Of Texas.

Polk followed Tyler as President and the sentiment for the annexation of Texas grew. Benton had advocated the recognition of the independence of Texas. He favored and later voted for the annexation of the state to the United States, but he would not join any intrigue to hasten this purely in the interest of the slave party.

A convention of delegates from southern states was proposed to insist on immediate annexation of Texas or disunion. This stirred Benton to battle and the opposition he raised caused the indefinite postponement of the convention. When one fiery South Carolinian proposed holding such a meeting in Nashville, Benton warned him that it might be dangerous to hold such a meeting in Tennessee; that Andrew Jackson was still alive and would oppose disunion on account of slavery as much as he had opposed nullification on account of the tariff.

"Preservation is as strong in the heart of the Old Roman as ever," Benton declared. "Texas disunion will be to him the same as tariff disunion; and if he detects a Texas disunionist nesting in his bed, I say again, woe unto the luckless wight."

The election of Polk greatly strengthened the annexationists. Then came the war with Mexico. Benton had opposed its origin, but after it was declared supported the cause of his country with all his vigor. The election of Polk marked the end of another era. The domination of the Southern unionists like Jackson and Benton in the Democratic Party was at an end. The day of the secessionists had arrived. Benton was still fighting like the lion that he was, braver and more impressive than ever, but the majority of his party was turning against him even his own state. But he did not swerve in his devotion to the Union.

Defeated At Last.

In 1848 the Whigs again won and put into the presidency Zachary Taylor, Louisiana slave holder, but as staunch a unionist as Benton himself. Two years later Henry Clay presented the last of his great compromise measures, and here again Benton opposed him. He declared that it was unfair to delay the admission of California as a state and to make this depender on other issues. He asserted that he did not believe in geographical parties and utterly rejected any slavery compromises except those to be found in the Constitution. The compromise was defeated, though its provisions were afterward passed in separate bills, California being admitted as a free state. Then came the Fugitive Slave Act, and this too, Benton refused to support. It was the last important fight Benton was to make as a senator.

While Benton was engaged in his final effort to prevent the extension of slavery into the territories, the supporters of Calhoun policies gained control of the Missouri legislature and passed resolutions in line with those proposed by Calhoun. Senator Atchison of Missouri presented them in the senate and Benton accepted the challenge. The battle for the control of Missouri was on. Benton campaigned the state and so closely was it divided that neither faction gained control of the legislature. It was deadlocked and some of the Calhounites voted with the Whigs to defeat Benton.

"Thus," says Theodore Roosevelt, another great nationalist of a later day, "after serving his state faithfully and ably for thirty years, he was finally turned out of the position which he had so worthily filled, because he had committed the crime of standing by the Union.

But the old lion, though defeated, was not crushed. In 1852 he was elected to represent his district in congress as a Union Democrat, and in the lower branch of the national legislature he continued to give his strength to the support of the Union and the confounding of its enemies. He heartily supported the move to build a railroad through to the Pacific, and made one of his greatest speeches in opposition to the Kansas-Nebraska bill which was designed to end the Missouri compromise and establish squatter sovereignty.

"In The Right Place."

He denounced the bill as a "bungling attempt to smuggle slavery into the territory and throughout all of the country, up to the Canada line and out to the Rocky Mountains," and, speaking of the Missouri compromise, declared: "I have stood upon it for about thirty years and mean to stand on it to the end of my life . . . . it is a binding covenant on both parties, and the more so on the South as she imposed it."

But the time of acutal secession was drawing near. The disloyalists in Missouri were stronger than ever. The next race between Benton and his pro-slavery opponent for the seat in congress was very close and the candidate of the so-called American party drew enough votes from Benton to defeat him.

Benton, still active, decided to spend his remaining days in literary work. He finished his famous "Thirty Years' View" of congress and in 1856, at the age of 74, made a lecture tour through New England, pointing out the dangers of the disunionist movement. He produced some other works, including "The Abridgement of the Debates in congress from 1787 to 1856," in sixteen volumes, dictating the last volume in a whisper from his death bed. He died in Washington, April 10, 1858, and immediately there was a tremendous change of sentiment in his native state. Now that he was gone, they loved him. The body was taken home and more than forty thousand people witnessed the funeral ceremonies.

Benton's aim in life might be summed up in a reply he once made in the senate to his great enemy, Calhoun, in his fight against the extension of slavery into the territories. Calhoun tauntingly remarked that he would now know where to find the senator from Missouri, and Benton replied:

"I shall be found in the right place—on the side of my country and the Union." For he was a patriot, a unionist, a believer in sound money, and a friend of the pioneer, firm in his sublime faith in the glorious destiny of his country.

It's No Snap to Be First Dogs of Land

Rob Roy and Prudence Prim Must Always Be White Although They Like Dirt Too.

Washington, June 30. — Being the President's dog might mean something to some canine quadruped but it means nothing at all to Rob Roy and Prudence Prim, President Coolidge's white collies.

Rob Roy has often signified his desire to be just an ordinary dog. He chafes under the great burden of being one of the first dogs of the land and would rather frequent alleys and back doors in search of vicarious meals any day.

His position requires him to be always snow white. He must be dignified under every ordeal, like Marie Antoinette on her way to the guillotine. The latter requisite Rob Roy has often avoided, such actions earning him the name of "Democratic." But democracy can be carried too far, old dogs of Washington assert, even in a republic.

Mrs. Coolidge often insists upon decking him with a blue ribbon which he must wear until he can slip around a corner and scratch it off. Mr. Coolidge makes him be quiet too often for Rob Roy's taste and when he isn't, talks to him as though he were still a mere puppy. When a dog gets to be five years old he should be able to bark at anything he pleases, Rob Roy believes.

As for Prudence Prim, she wants to tear along country roads and through woods. Miss Prim, as the White House insists upon calling her is really a nature loving dog. She loves the woods, the birds, the babling brooks, the trees, but particularly, soft muck ground where she can excavate for imaginary moles and rats. Now she must wear blue and pink ribons, be genteel to Rob Roy and act like a lady.

On state occasions she must wear a straw bonnet and be nice to everyone even the most impossible kind of people.

But both dogs are looking forward to the vacation in the Adirondacks. There, they hope, the bars will be let down and Rob Roy can be a little bit vulgar and Prudence Prim can be a little bit unconventional.

The BOBCAT

BY HENRY C. ROWLAND

SYNOPSIS.

Big Tim Burke, real estate operator, and known to his associates as a land pirate, discharges one of his young lieutenants called Pol Gaillard, because he is irritated by the latter's sickness of appearance, and nonchalant manner. Pol learns that his ex-boss covets a desirable piece of Long Island property owned by Professor Husted and that another land shark, Michael Cadrigan, is after the same bit of land. Cadrigan lives on the shore of Long Island sound with his step-daughter, Veronica. His estate is across the bay from that of Professor Husted. The old professor lives like a hermit, and Veronica is his only visitor. Cadrigan asks Veronica to discontinue calling on the old man, intimating that the professor's enemies may harm her. Noticing a sloop anchored opposite the house, Veronica suggests to her step-father that they call on the owner. They are invited on board, and their host introduces himself as Pol Gaillard, posing as an itinerant poet and artist. That night Pol rows over to the Husted house and while he is ashore his sloop is cut adrift. He rows over to his boat and releases his second anchor. The next night he and Veronica meet at Professor Husted's house. On leaving Pol finds his boat has been scuttled. The professor invites Pol to be his guest and he accepts, although he is able to salvage his boat. Pol is asked to dine with the Cadrigans. Arriving at the house, he finds one of their neighbors, Mrs. Tate, calling on them.

INSTALLMENT XXI.

POL SEALS A COMPACT.

Veronica excused herself to go to the stables and inspect her favorite horse. She did not ask Pol to accompany her. Then Cadrigan was summoned to the telephone. Mrs. Tate, who had walked over, took her leave. She suggested that Pol go with her to the side gate.

Mr. Cadrigan told me what you were doing," she said, "and that you are a landscape gardener. That is an ideal occupation."

"It would be if one could occupy one's self about it."

"I'd like to have you see my place. Without promising anything, you understand."

"Entirely, Mrs. Tate. I am not in a position to be promised anything. I am not even a promising young man."

"Why not?"

"Because such a promise must have some sort of solid emplacement, like a long range gun."

"Have you studied landscape gardening seriously?"

"I have never done anything seriously, but I understand the classic fundamentals of the different schools, and I have examined and sketched a good many beautiful gardens in Italy, and France, and England."

"That should be the best schooling, I think. I adore Italian gardens, but my house is Norman."

"Then I think I should stick to that throughout," Pol said. "The Normandy poplars might not thrive here, but the Lombardy ones do well enough with proper care, and are much the same but fuller. The whole scheme of things is rectilinear, and you could sprinkle in your pottery urns at the corners, and cats, skunks, and griffins and things."

"You're getting me excited. Could I have a reflecting pool?"

"Yes, if the ground lies properly, although it is no strictly Norman, but French Rennaissance. I suppose you've got the geranium window boxes?"

"Not yet."

"Hardy flowers are the keynote. You should have a lot of rose trees, damask, and grafted eglantines. I think that landscape gardening, unlike architecture, should be strictly formal and classic to produce the best effect."

They drew near a little oak and iron gate set in a thick arbor vitae hedge that bordered a lane between the two properties. As Pol laid his hand upon the latch, Mrs. Tate said pensively:

"You seem to be working fast, Mr. Gaillard. But sometimes more haste, less speed."

"I suppose you are referring to my peculiar evolutions on landing at the float with Miss Cadrigan."

"You are rather clairvoyance yourself, Mr. Gaillard. They looked peculiar from the loggia. Mr. Cadrigan's face was rather grim. What in the world were you two trying to do?"

"We stooped at the same time to take the painter, and our heads collided. Miss Cadrigan lost her balance, and to keep her from falling overboard I grabbed her round the waist. Then I lost my own balance, and to save us both from going overboard swung her over into the launch. It started to drift out and might have left us in the gap if we had not squirmed in any old way, and that rolled us onto the floor. This struck Miss Cadrigan as so absurdly funny that she was in danger of hysterics."

"I don't wonder. What happened then?"

"I acted quickly to prevent them."

"How do you prevent hysterics, Mr. Gaillard? I ask for information, because I've had them once or twice and might some day have them again?"

"If that should happen while I am about, Mrs. Tate, send for me."

"Is that included in a course of landscape gardening?"

"It is more of a post graduate course, sometimes practiced in the completed gardens."

"I see. Plucking the flowers. Or grafting tulips, perhaps."

"Your wit is ready, Mrs. Tate. I trust the process was not visible from the loggia."

"No—but it would not be difficult to reconstruct." She looked up at him with a flare of mischief. "Is the cure a prophylactic one?"

"All cures are that. I should say that if one felt hysterics threatening, the treatment would avert them if taken in time."

"It is worth considering, Mr. Gaillard. I get hysterical every time I look across the water and think of a big barrack of a shoddy hotel possibly going up there. It would ruin my place. I should want to sell it and clear out. While the professor was in the retreat we felt secure, but now that he's back safe and sane there's no telling what may happen."

"I don't wonder it makes you feel hysterical," said Pol.

She laid her hand on his arm. "Do you know, Mr. Gaillard, I've got a very strong intuition that you are going to have it in your power to save us that catastrophe. I'd like to make an ally of you."

"With Cadrigan?"

"By no means. Just us two. I don't trust Cadrigan."

"Why should you trust me?"

"We women have our instincts, I would trust you very far."

"Not enough, Mrs. Tate. There is no such thing as a limited trust. The mere expression is a paradox, a solecism."

"Then I'll say that I'd trust you implicitly if you gave me your word."

"Thank you. Then whatever the effort may be worth, I shall give you my word to do my best to keep Cadrigan from getting control of this property and to keep anybody else from doing anything to it that might prove in any way damaging, whether in money value or esthetic injury to your estate, and here's my hand on it."

Mrs. Tate's small pretty was clasped in his.

The firm pressure and, no doubt, some sympathetic current brought a sudden glow to her face and a misty look to her gray eyes. Her fresh lips parted in a smile.

"I've never thought of asking as much as that."

"It is a free gift, for what it may be worth. More than that, it would give me great pleasure to offer you the best advice I can about the laying out of your grounds on the understanding that there is to be no mention of any money fee."

"But—Mr. Gaillard," she protested.

Pol, neglecting to release her hand, made a little gesture with the other. "I have not yet decided to launch on a professional course. I think I prefer the life of a wandering poet. I have promised you this because I am deeply touched at the trust you express in an unknown vagabond like myself."

"As I said before, I rely upon my instinct, Mr. Gaillard. I would trust you to any extent."

"Even to the cure of possible hysterics?"

"Well——" she looked aside. "I seem to be still trusting you with my hand." Her face tilted upward. "That shows confidence, I think."

"That gesture," said Pol, "is in the nature of a compact that requires to be sealed," and, leaning forward, not too swiftly, he proceeded to seal it on the fresh parted lips.

The pretty widow offered no distinct resistance. Like the excellent business woman that Mr. Cadrigan had found her, she went through with the deal. Pol found even a sense of eagerness on her part to weld their interests. It is apt to be this way with lone widows who are required to manage their own affairs. No doubt her feminine instinct told her that such a cachet would be in this case more binding than any stroke of pen, that if this pen was mightier than the sword, so might the lips be mightier than the pen.

HAVE BODIES THAT DO NOT NEED MENDING

Advancing Years "Would Mean Nothing" If Proper Attention Were Paid to Providing Sturdy Physiques for Boys and Girls.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator From New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Somewhere I saw a motion picture with the caption: "It is better to build boys than to mend men."

Nothing can be truer than this. By properly building the youth of the country disease would be reduced beyond all measure. The change in the sickness rate would not be observed at once but twenty years from now the general sickness and death rate would be amazingly low, in my judgment.

Much of the energy of present-day doctors is spent in overcoming defects dating back to youth, or in treating the results of faulty habits acquired in childhood. The doctors are spending their time mending men.

I know it isn't financially good for the medical profession to spread wide the knowledge of how to prevent disease. But I am proud of my professional brethren. I never heard one of them complain about the modern methods of educating in health. They find no fault with our teaching the public a manner of living which, if practiced by everybody, will surely reduce the income of every doctor in North America.

The greatest progress in medicine is to be found in the field of youth. Building boys is the most attractive of all human jobs. If they can be taught how to eat and sleep and walk and stand, they will grow into vigorous manhood. They will become men who won't need mending.

We must have doctors and always will need doctors. Until human nature is radically changed there will be plenty of folk who will utterly disregard the needs of their bodies. There will be millions of persons to be mended and millions of dollars to be spent for the mending.

If there were no higher reason for good health than wiping out the cost and economic losses of sickness, it would be worth while to build well in youth. To have health in early life and to give such heed to the body that defects are removed as soon as found, will do away with the need of extensive mending. Building in childhood and youth is the real secret of vigorous middle life, prolonged usefulness, and preservation of vigor into ripe old age.

Years should mean nothing and would mean nothing if proper attention were given to every boy and girl all through the period of growth and development. That is what is meant by building boys instead of mending men.

You can't live to be a hundred by living in a rickety, broken, diseased body. Just as certainly as a neglected building will break down and fall into ruin, so will a neglected body. You should be as careful of your body as you are with the house you are building. When attention to the rules of life is your practice from earliest youth there will be need for few repairs.

Answers To Health Queries.

T. M. Q.—My thirteen-year-old boy has white specks on his eyelashes. Can this be cured?

2—Kindly advise me if it is injurious for him to walk 12 to 16 miles at a time without stopping for something to eat?

A.—This condition is due to blepharitis marginalis. Consult your doctor about this.

2—Yes.

D. G. Q.—What causes my eyes to be sunken? Although my face is plump, my eyes make me have a haggared appearance. How can I build up the tissues above and below the eyes?

A—This appearance may be due to a run-down condition. Have a thorough examination and in this way definite treatment can be advised.

Chicago, [illegible] the close and [illegible] on the Chicago Board of Trade today presented the rather unusual spectacle of a rising wheat market and a downward trend in other pits.

July wheat closed unchanged from yesterday's final quotation but the other positions registered an advance of ⅞ of a cent. The trend was downward early in the day because of the weak cables, fine growing weather and heavy crop movements, but heat complaints from the Northwest steadied the market while cash prices were also better although exports amounted to only a quarter of a million bushels.

The defeat of the Fess bill took the life out of corn and that cereal hit new crop lows, closing from one-quarter to 2⅛ cents under the previous figures.

July oats lost 1 ⅜ cents to touch a new low while the other positions were also fractionally off.

Provisions closed higher because two commission houses were heavy buyers of September lard.

MYSTERIOUS UNKNOWN DONATES TO BRITAIN.

London.—An unknown man, whose only identification is his statement that he was born in England but has lived in the United States for the past 50 years, has just sent Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, bonds to the value of $6,850 to be applied to the reduction of the Anglo American debt.

This is the third donation sent by the man during the past three years as a contribution toward the English war debt.

Churchill was unable to write the man through lack of address, but publicly thanked him through the press.

NORTH DAKOTA VOTERS TO POLLS TODAY.

STATE BUSINESS UP

Nonpartisans Hope To Retain Control National Questions Absent.—Nye Is Candidate.

Fargo, N. D. June 30 (United Press)—State industrialism was the chief issue before the voters of North Dakota in the republican primaries today.

The continued existence of the bank of North Dakota and the state owned mill and elevator at Grand Forks, outstanding enterprises of the Nonpartisan program inaugurated by the special session of the legislature in 1919, will depend largely on the choice of candidates today.

The Nonpartisans hope to retain the state industries while the Independent Voters' Association, a fusion group of Democrats and Republicans, is backing a program "to take the state out of competition with private business."

The Nonpartisan ticket is headed by United States Senator Gerald P. Nye and Governor A. G. Sorlie, both seeking re-election, and the Independents are led by L. B. Hanna, former governor and congressman who is a candidate for the Senate, and Major J. M. Hanley, candidate for governor.

In addition there are the so-called "real" nonpartisans who charged during the campaign that Governor Sorlie was not wholeheartedly for their program who have filed the name of J. A. McGovern for governor "to continue the principles of real non-partisanism." Republican nomination is considered as tantamount to election in North Dakota, a contention which, however, the Farmer-Labor party denies.

A United States Senator is to be elected for a short term today to succeed Senator Gerald P. Nye, whose appointment to the vacancy, caused by the death of the late Senator E. F. Ladd, now expires, and nominations are to be made for a U. S. Senator, three congressmen, and a complete state ticket in the republican, democratic, and farmer-labor primaries. There are no contests in the latter two. The democratic ticket, although complete, is regarded as a form to retain that party's organization in North Dakota.

Should the nonpartisans win, however, the Democratic ticket, led by F. F. Burchard of Grand Forks for senator and D. M. Holmes of Grand Forks for governor, may assume increased importance as a vehicle for anti-nonpartisan expression in the fall.

William Lemke, at one time national vice president of the Nonpartisan League, and former attorney general, is the candidate of the farmer-labor party for senator and Ralph Ingerson, state senator, is its choice for governor.

Although beer and light wine were injected into the republican primaries by the candidacy of C. P. Stone for senator on a "wet" platform, little interest appears to have been aroused. National issues have not seemed to interest North Dakota voters during the campaign.

Editorial Assn. Opens Los Angeles Meeting

Editors From Thirty-One States And Alaska Present At National Gathering—Prominent Publishers Present.

Los Angeles, June 30. (United Press).—Newspaper editors from thirty-one states and Alaska were here today for the 41st annual convention of the National Editorial Association. Many nationally known publishers were among the visiting delegates.

Business sessions began this morning and will continue throughout the week. After the convention routine has been disposed of, the visitors will be entertained by various Southern California communities, remaining in this section until July 10 when they go to San Francisco for several days visit in the northern section of the states.

The special trains, bearing eastern editors and members of their families arrived at El Centro, California two days ago. After touring Imperial, Orange and San Diego counties, the trains pulled into Los Angeles this morning, for the business sessions of the convention.

Minnesota led in representation with two Pullman loads of delegates, headed by Governor Theodore Christensen, in private life a newspaper publisher. Governor Harry Byrd, of Virginia, a publisher also, was among those who arrived today.

Nebraska, home of Frank O. Edgecombe, blind president of the National Editorial Association, was represented by a large delegation.

During their stay in Southern California the visiting scribes will be guests of the Southern California Editorial Association. Communities and organizations which have arranged entertainment include Beverly Hills, Pasadena, San Fernado valley, Federated States Societies, San Gabriel Valley Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., Los Angeles Realty Board Long Beach, Fontana, Riverside, Redlands, San Bernardino, the Breakfast Club, Catalina Island, Ventura and Santa Barbara.

Gordon S. Chapman, Sandersville, Georgia, editor, and publicity representative of the National Editorial Association, will write a daily news story of convention events and sightseeing tours. The All-Year Club of Southern California will furnish "mats" to illustrate the articles, which will be sent to newspapers throughout the country during the convention.

En route to San Francisco after visiting Southern California show-places, the editors will stop at Ventura and Santa Barbara. Elaborate plans are underway for the publishers' entertainment at Santa Barbara to show what has been accomplished in the way of restoration since the earthquake a year ago.

Theodore McGuire, formerly of Stigler, Okla., arrived in Conception Junction today to make his future home with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Z. O. Ashford.

Four Derby Winners Will Start in Race

Bubbling Over, Carlaris, Baggenbagge and Haste to Compete in American Derby July 10.

Chicago, June 30.—A glittering field will face the starter when the barrier is sprung for the American derby at Washington Park on July 10.

Already there are four derby winners of this season—Bubbling Over, Carlaris, Bagenbaggage and Haste—entered in the classic, not to mention a number of other speedy colts.

Bubbling Over and Bagenbaggage ran as teammates in the Kentucky derby, where they finished 'one-two,'' scoring a notable victory for Colonel E. R. Bradley.

Haste, with the peerless Sand up, stopped the Bradley winning streak, nosing out Bagenbaggage in a hurricane finish in the Fairmount derby.

Turf experts point to Carlaris as an unknown quantity. To date he has not met any of the other three and track fans are eager to see the son of the great Pharlaris run at Washington Park. Carlaris won the Tia Juana derby by thirteen lengths against a first class field and won the rich Coffroth handicap with such ease as to astonish the turf world. Carlaris was unable to run in the Kentucky derby due to an injured leg, sustained when the spirited colt kicked himself in his stable.

N. T. Gentry Urges Training of Youth

Enactment of Good Laws, Enforceable By Penalties, Is Not Enough, Says Attorney-General.

Mexico, Mo., June 30.—Speaking before a gathering of Kiwanians, N. T. Gentry, Attorney-General, declared that parents of today should seek to build character in the youth of today so that laws of our land may be respected because they are right and not merely because they are laws that hold out penalties to transgressors in our jails, prisons or penitentiaries.

Speaking on law enforcement, Gentry criticized what he termed a ''modern tendency to satisfy ourselves with the mere enactment of good laws, and failure to train boys and girls by inculcating in them fundamentals so that they will respect laws as proper guides of conduct on a right and wrong basis.'' Character building in the home was never more needed than today and is an answer to the ''youth problem'' and ''current lawlessness'' he said.

Zoned Cities in U. S. Show Rapid Increase

Washington, June 30. (United Press) More than 27,000,000 people live in zoned cities in the United States today while less than 6,000,000 had this distinction ten years ago.

Reports to the Commerce Department indicate 436 municipalities have zoning requirements now while only six cities of the country were zoned in 1916.

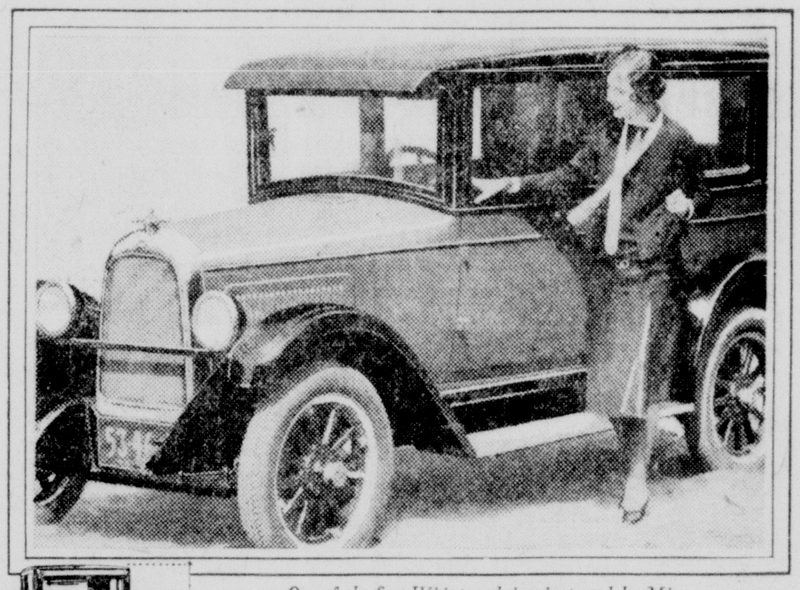
Now- for America a revolutionary European-type high-speed Light Car

This New Car Offers:

30 miles on a gallon of gasoline
55 miles an hour—5 to 30 miles in 13 seconds
4-wheel brakes—stops in 51 feet from 40 miles an hour
Turns in 34-foot circle—easiest car in America to park
5 feet 8 inches high—lower gravity center—greater safety
European-type body—more inside room than any other light car



One of the first Whippets being inspected by Miss Lois Wilson at her New York motion picture studio

A three-minute study of these remarkable facts may save you from buying an obsolete automobile

THIS is the announcement of a revolutionary new-type car, different from anything you have ever known before.

A car that combines the advanced engineering practice of Europe with new and improved standards of American performance.

This new car has a low, European-type body. With height and length in true symmetrical proportion.

It is 5 feet 8 inches high . . . not as tall as the average man. Yet it provides more room and comfort than you've ever found in any automobile of this class before.

It has a high-torque, 31 horsepower motor of small bore and long stroke—the same engineering principle used in the fastest racing cars of America and Europe.

It turns in a 34-foot circle . . . that's less than the width of an average city street. You can park in 14 feet . . . which is much less than the space required for the ordinary car.

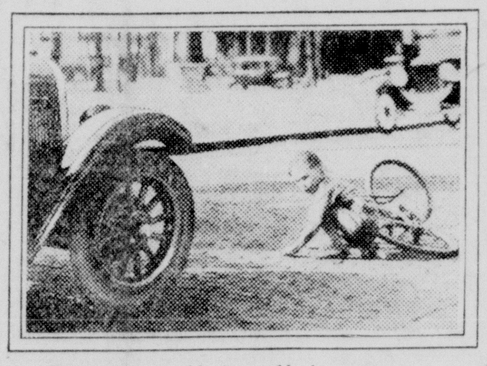
4-wheel brakes are an integral part of this new car's chassis design . . . a necessity which light car owners have not heretofore enjoyed. Measured tests show that it will stop in 51 feet from a speed of 40 miles an hour.

Its center of gravity is extremely low, with ample road clearance . . . thus giving a sense of security you have never found in any light car. Something you actually feel when you drive this car.

Compared with old-fashioned, bulky cars the Whippet appears smaller and much more graceful

It is a complete new car . . . designed and built as a unit . . . not an old-fashioned reconstructed chassis.

For over three years, Willys-Overland engineers in Europe and America have been developing it. Over 360,000 miles of road tests proved the practical advantages of this car before it was released for production.



11-inch 4-wheel brakes enable this car to stop in 51 feet from a speed of 40 miles per hour

The distinctive body lines of the Overland Whippet frankly resemble the smartest automobiles of America and Continental Europe. Stand in front of this car and you can imagine yourself on the boulevards of France.

Low-swung . . . rakish . . . graceful as a whippet . . . that's the only way to describe it.

Complete symmetry of design has been achieved with compact external dimensions.

Compared with contemporary big, bulky cars the Overland Whippet appears smarter and much more graceful. That's because height and length are in true artistic proportion.

In the Overland Whippet you have the feeling of riding closer to the ground . . . with the resultant sense of solidity and absence of that sidesway so noticeable in the conventional type of car. That high-up-in-the-air feeling is gone . . . here is a new kind of riding comfort. Step into this car and you will be surprised to find so much spacious room.

You can compare the Overland Whippet with all other American light cars on the basis of price alone. But from the standpoint of engineering, performance, comfort and quality, it has established an entirely new criterion by which all other light cars must be judged.

The Overland Whippet is furnished in three body styles . . . Sedan, Touring and Coupe.

See this new-type car

You have never seen a car like this before.

With the introduction of the Overland Whippet, it is not sound judgment today to consider the purchase of a less modern car.

A new trend of automobile design is dawning in America. Other light cars of this design will follow this one.

But today Overland . . . and Overland alone . . . offers you these unique engineering attainments.

In fairness to yourself, see this wonderful new-type car.

Willys-Overland, Inc., Toledo, Ohio.

Two engineering ideals combined

The Overland Whippet represents a combination of the most advanced European and American engineering thought.
